

Revelstoke Mountain Resort: Backdrop to Top Industry Films

For Immediate Release:

Revelstoke, BC – What do this season’s top ski and snowboard films have in common? Revelstoke Mountain Resort (RMR) is featured in the best of them.

During the 2013/14 season when the premier production companies traveled the continent in search of the best locations to shoot their feature films more than ever chose to set up shop in Revelstoke.

Rob Elliott, General Manager at Revelstoke Mountain Resort, attributes the strong showing in part to the snow, “this past season the quantity and quality of snow we received certainly played a factor in why so many films were shot at Revelstoke. Our location meant we were sheltered from the warm weather systems that plagued the Pacific Coast from California up.”

Elliott adds consistent snow is just a small part of the overall package, “Revelstoke delivers the goods, with phenomenal features inbounds and great access to the backcountry, everything an adventure ski film crew could ever hope for can be found right here.”

Skiing superstar Lynsey Dyer filmed a section of her new film, Pretty Faces, at RMR and attests to the draw of the resort, “we filmed great footage on resort, something that is really hard to do these days.”

Many visiting production companies went a step further to get at the pristine powder also flying with Selkirk Tangiers Heli Skiing— gaining exclusive access to another 500,000 acres of diverse terrain.

For Greg Epstein, and his Teton Gravity Research team, Revelstoke had it all when they were scouting for their latest film, Almost Ablaze, “We chose Revelstoke because of the snow quality, extensive, playful terrain, and the ability to get out every day whether by foot, lift, heli or snowcat,” he said. “Based on our athletes' experience TGR will be back in the Revelstoke area for years to come.”

High budget films hitting the big screen this fall with Revelstoke in a leading role include: Unicorn Picnic (Pretty Faces), Teton Gravity Research (Almost Ablaze), Matchstick Productions (Days of my Youth), Poorboyz (Twenty) and Absinthe (Heavy Mental).
